The First Sunday of Lent, from 'Divine Intimacy' by Father Gabriel

The Great Combat

On this day...the Church invites us to the great combat, the struggle against sin which will bring us to the Easter Resurrection.

After forty days of rigorous fast, while He is feeling the pangs of hunger, Jesus is tempted by Satan to change stones into bread. No one can undertake a serious program of penance or mortification without feeling its discomforts; but that is the time to resist the insinuating voices which invite us to condescend to the demands of nature...

Jesus was next tempted to pride. "If you are the Son of God, cast yourself down...and in their hands the angels shall bear you up." Such a miracle would have aroused the admiration and enthusiasm of the people, but Jesus knew that His Father had chosen an entirely different way for Him - the way of humiliations rather than of triumphs, the way of the Cross and of death. Because He had no desire to escape from this way, He resolutely rejected the suggestion to pride. The best means of conquering temptations to pride and vanity is to choose exactly what humiliates us and makes us appear little in the eyes of others.

The devil returns to the attack and tempts Jesus to avarice: "All these will I give you, if falling down you will adore me." But Jesus replies, "The Lord your God shall you adore and Him alone shall you serve." He whose heart is anchored in God will never let it be drawn away from His service by an attraction for, or envy of, earthly things. But if this strong adherence to God is weakened or lost, the temptations to avarice will often succeed in making even those stray who have a special vocation to be "serving God alone."
